

To find out what you can expect from the Super 8 journey, please read the following account which I downloaded in one of my visions!

In the beginning there was trepidation because this was an uncharted journey that the Super eight were embarking on.

For all the talk of human potential and the unlimited possibility that the mind offered, the members of Super eight were now going to have to walk the walk.

They assumed that their former personal or spiritual development had prepared them for this voyage. But Super eight would be in a league of its own. Its sincerity set it apart. Its diligence was like no other.

Vineet had not sugar coated the journey. He had made it clear that their ego would buck like a horse. They had accepted this journey into the quantum field with awareness of egoic dangers. It was clear that the organism that was their individual ego's would try its best to survive.

As they entered into the battleground of the Super eight arena, each of the seven chosen ones knew that sincerity would be the only way to overcome themselves. It was drilled into their heads by Vineet that nothing else but sincere devotion to the journey would suffice.

Anything other than dedication to the journey would result in failure, whether that be individually or collectively.

Each of the eight had been born into an illusion. A hypnotic lie that the power lied outside of them, hence they were schooled in the struggle and suffering of life.

Overcoming themselves in their mental programming would be 90% of the blood, sweat and tears. This was just the reality.

Vineet had made it clear that for them to learn this quantum way of being and existing, they would have to pay a price. They would have to shed the skin of their identity. Death of their false self at the entrance of the Super eight arena.

The seven had been selected. Those that were most fit for the journey into the quantum field were picked to discover how to create reality that would involve the willingness to go through the ups and downs. They were about to learn the ultimate skill of life that mystical schools of the bygone era had taught. Yet it has been suppressed in modern society.

As the wisely chosen seven arrived at the Super eight arena, they were reminded of overcoming themselves.

Once this was done, they knew that time and time again, they would come back to this fundamental lesson 101. Not to be dramatic, this was where the hero's journey would unfold or end prematurely.

This is where the seven had to learn that they were not their identity. They were not their ego. They had to carry this lesson with them each and every day of the super 8 journey.

Overcoming themselves took place in two worlds. One was in the Newtonian world of the physical. They could no longer think and feel as their familiar self in their everyday life.

And secondly, they would not be permitted to carry this familiar self into their mediation into the quantum.

A new identity had to be born that they would piggy back on. They quickly realised, as Vineet led the tribe into the unified field of intelligence, that their identity would interfere with their intended creations.

They all had the awareness in meditations that their mind was out of control. An unruly dog that was their master. The role of the master and servant had been reversed. No wonder their reality resembled their ego, rather than their heart.

In the early days of the Super eight gatherings, much doubt was aired about whether this quantum journey would be fortuitous. Much of their ego reared its ugly head. Vineet encouraged all of them to be honest and to share their egoic identity that was trying to sabotage their voyage.

Like any new journey they had to befriend the unknown. Like crossing the river of change, on the other side was their dream destination but their ego would only want to entertain the familiar, Their thoughts and feelings were causing mayhem. The seduction of the unenlightened was true.

Yet they trusted. Their daily meditations were non-negotiable. Vineet was very strict with this protocol. The only way that they would move from novice to mastery over their reality would be if they did not shrug their responsibility.

Over the first few months, their reality did not change much. Yet each of the tribe members took full responsibility. The scientific evidence from the work of teachers like Dr Joe Dispenza was evident that humans had forgotten their godly status. They had fallen from grace and Super 8 would be the space that ushered them back to their divine status. The realisation that they were Gods, but the initiation would be a testing one.

Over the early months, each tribe member becomes accustomed to not only shedding every morsel of their identity that did not serve them. Each of them were guided in the sculpting of an identity that would serve their highest ideal.

Each time they gathered you could feel they were starting to morph away from powerlessness. Their egoic view of their mortal self was being overcome. Each of them showed up each and every day with the promise of learning to create their reality.

As they ventured on into the Super eight journey, they learnt to pull up their life force energy into their hearts. Many of the tribe started expressing heightened levels of heart energy, travelling up from their lower energy centres into their heart centre. They started shedding the traumas of their animalistic centres and pulled this energy with the breath work that Vineet had taught them into their heart. They literally felt the love of divine intelligence. Whenever they managed to pull this energy up.

A fair few were experiencing what could be described as an incarnation of their divine nature. Abandonment feelings being replaced with oneness and connection. In their waking hours, the tribe noticed profound shifts in their perception. They reported that they had started to see the world from the eyes of truth that it was a loving creation.

At this point in the tribe's journey, their pineal glands had become activated as individuals, which was followed by unexpected mystical experiences. Being visited by blue beings that were kindly and lovingly supporting them on their journey.

They reported that these mystical experiences had confirmed that reality was not what their mind had made them believe.

Coming into contact with the loving intelligence made the tribe feel they were arriving back home again. Many tears were shed by the tribe. Not only the letting go of sadness of misunderstanding life and the world at large, but a gratitude that at last they started to get it.

The Super eight journey was starting to reveal the truth about possibility that they always felt in their hearts.

About 5 months in, coming up to the middle of 2023, it had become second nature to overcome their ego. Vineet kept a close eye on everyone, as each of the worthy tribe members started to bask deeper into the quantum realm. They were getting comfortable residing beyond time and space.

They regularly entered and made contact with the objective divine force that was the unified field.

Many individuals reported being able to find the sweet spot of the present moment which was where possibilities in the quantum field resided. Whenever they crossed over, they not only experienced their brain waves slowing down to create stillness, they experienced themselves as pure awareness.

They had heard Vineet talk about becoming pure consciousness, which was the only way to effect or create reality. In their first hand meditative experience, the quantum field was more real than they ever imagined. More real than physical reality. Many described their journey's into the quantum realm as going on an odyssey to space.

Many months deep into the Super eight voyage the collective had now learnt to hold their attention on their intended creations. They literally felt themselves firing and wiring their visions into the field. They experienced feeling their future before it manifested.

In their meetups, they would come out of mediations believing that their reality had shifted into one that resembled their dreams. Every time the group would gather in the arena, each of them would bring a physical object to put into the wooden treasure chest to represent their manifestations.

Reality was regularly bending to their will now. The physical reality was responding to them having affected the field of intelligence. Synchronicities were coming thick and fast and a plethora of opportunities were transpiring in their daily lives.

The group were now trusting in the unknown. They all understood the unknown was where they all had to reside, because this was where situations and events would knock on the door of life.

Pushing and forcing things which was the way of their survival brain was now becoming a thing of their past consciousness. There was now evidence of a higher way.

Yet the group also understood that this was not an excuse to ignore the aligned physical actions. After all they had understood they had to become in the physical world who they imagined themselves being in their quantum world. Disparity between the two would work against their efforts to affect reality.

The gap between the two closed. Their realities resembled their ideals. A few of the tribe members had reported that health conditions were now healed or healing. How could they feel unwell if they were feeling so good in their waking hours?

The manifested opportunities were stacking up. One of the members spoke about her dream job manifesting out of the blue and another spoke about business clients queuing up to work with him like never before. Their specific intentions were materialising in front of their eyes.

As the journey into the deeper realms of consciousness continued, surrendering had become a key learning that each member had taken on board. As important as intention was, surrender would supercharge their intention so to affect the field.

All superstition and pop culture personal development had been stripped to reveal the truth of their origin. Each member of the selected seven was reporting life changing experiences.

Each member spoke about becoming who they always wanted to be. Happiness and joy were off the scale. Dropping the idea that they had to have a, b or c to be grateful. They were experiencing peace of mind like never before.

The bond of the group became closer. Collective and individual intentions that had been agreed upon at the beginning of the term were now virtually all a reality.

Their initiation had been painful at times, but it was all worth it. They had loved themselves enough to follow through irrespective of what their mind and body said. It was paying off.

A fair few members described themselves as feeling giant levels of self worth. Worthy of receiving. Worthy of God's love. Mother and father traumas had well and truly been transcended, which tended to be the root pain of most people.

We as a group may have approached the end of the 12 months, but this taste of their power to create reality had only just begun.

Yes, our wildest creations had come to pass, but they paled in comparison to experiencing the love of divine intelligence.

God was no longer a religious ideal. God was no longer a figment of their imagination but a reality, an intelligence that they could call upon and connect too.

Collectively the eight had gone from thinking to doing to being supernatural.

Transcending their environment of limitation to being more and more unlimited, as spirit intended for them.

Their consciousness really did create reality. They had the road map now. Evidence spoke louder than words.

They were home.....
